PRESS RELEASE

Tobacco Tea Theatre Company Parish Fête-ality: A Game of Scones

by Christopher Cutting

In the Parish Council elections, you win or you die

When murder sweeps through the parish of Jowlhurst, the members of Jowlhurst Parish Council scheme and vie against one another for absolute power. A manic vicar, NIMBY farmers, the Women's Institute and the National Trust are at war with a circle of debauched bohemian aristocrats and the internally divided, frightened villagers for supremacy over the local countryside. In this Machiavellian struggle, with betrayal around every corner, only one faction can rule the Parish Council once and for all.

Hot Fuzz meets Game of Thrones in this brand new dark comedy from satire maestros Tobacco Tea, the company behind The Accidental Adventures of Sherlock Holmes and Vitomori.

Tobacco Tea Theatre is a Bristol-based company specialising in original satirical comedies. Writer/Director Christopher Cutting and Producer Lucy Ahmed bring this hour of comic countryside carnage to the Edinburgh Fringe after sell-out runs in Bristol, Brighton Fringe and London. Tobacco Tea is performing Parish Fete-ality: A Game of Scones at this year's Fringe, as well as their 2015 Edinburgh sell-out show, The Accidental Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.

'What's not to love about a comedy that puts a rural community in the spotlight as they slowly implode from the inside out?' Inter:Mission Bristol
